Securities and Shareholder Suits

RK&O's litigators have fought for our clients' objectives in courtrooms and before arbitration panels around the country and throughout the world. We represent clients in class action and derivative cases, multi-district proceedings, parallel state and federal lawsuits, and cases with parallel regulatory and criminal proceedings or investigations. Our clients come to us when a matter requires the involvement of tough, veteran litigators with a sophisticated understanding of both the law and the business considerations underlying a dispute. In representing our hedge fund and financial services clients, we draw upon our industry-specific knowledge of their businesses to help solve their problems effectively and in a cost-efficient manner. We also represent senior management of public and private companies and public company directors who, increasingly, must address a host of corporate governance, regulatory and criminal issues at the same time that they defend themselves in private litigation. We work together with our regulatory and corporate colleagues, as well as former prosecutors and senior SEC officials now with the firm, to bring to bear an unusually broad range of expertise to solve our clients' securities-related problems.

EXPERIENCE

- Represented outside directors of a public corporation in federal and state derivative actions arising out of company's revisions of estimates for proved oil and gas reserves.
- Represented directors of a foreign corporation against claims by a minority shareholder in cash-out merger transaction.
- Represented a venture capital limited partnership in obtaining dismissal of federal court action asserting § 16(b) "short swing" profits claim.
